Schedule B to By-law Number

Reasons for the Proposed Designation

This large three storey home was erected between 1890 and 1892 on a lot that then extended to the corner of Church Street East and Union Street. The property was conveyed in 1890 from Hannah Vodden to Algernon (Al) Williams, a prominent member of the Brampton business community. A prosperous jeweller, Mr. Williams was the first local agent for the Bell Telephone Company and was also a local agent for Canada Steamship Lines and the Grand Trunk Railway.

The house has been described as having a combination of elements from the Queen Anne Revival and the high Victorian Gothic styles, giving it a most eclectic appearance. The high roof displays a rather unique roof design in three of the four gables. In the upper area of the gables, surrounding the single square window, are wooden panels in which are carved flower motifs in two alternating patterns. Below this section, is the "fish scale" shingle pattern, a design that is fairly common in Brampton's older homes. The main chimney of the home rises approximately 25 feet, independent of the house, and in recent years has been supported by a rod from the peak of the roof.

The house has eight stained-glass windows with designs, including a semi-elliptic design over the front main-floor window and a large two-pane window overlooking the main staircase landing. As well, there are six other windows composed of leaded squares of stained glass.
